

Dr. Robert Wood is Professor of Pediatrics, Chief of Pediatric Allergy, Immunology, and Rheumatology, Director of the Pediatric Clinical Research Unit, and Deputy Director of the Institute of Clinical and Translational Research at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. He is recognized internationally as an expert in both food allergy and childhood asthma and has published over 300 manuscripts and book chapters, as well as four books. He has served on numerous editorial boards and other leadership positions, including President of the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma, and Immunology.